Practical Problem Solving

Continually improving requires continually solving problems – whether these are technical or recurring day-to-day problems.

What is the best way of engaging my team in problem solving?

How do we find the root cause, so the problem doesn't recur?

In just half a day, you will learn practical and proven tools and techniques that really work on the shop floor.

The aim of this workshop is to illustrate how a systematic approach can be used to implement actual improvements and will include syndicate group working.

Management by Fact

We will show you, using team based activity, how to identify process / production variability and what changes will give you the biggest improvements for the least time, cost and effort.

You will learn tools and techniques to demonstrate to your team and senior management the real bottom line benefits of implementing change.
